

The NAB has nothing to do with XM Radio, and should not be able to control what XM transmits. I don't know the specifics of the laws regarding this, but it seems absurd for the NAB to be able get the government to change what a company operating within its legal rights is doing. When will the NAB attack accuweather.com and other websites, they provide the same that XM does, just not in the car, yet, and there are cars with satellite internet connection.
